

ENGAGING YOUTH FROM AROUND THE WORLD

VERMONT, August 5th— When volunteering at MCW's centers in Tanzania and Rwanda, I thought I understood youth perseverance. However, at MCW's 12th Annual Youth Leadership Retreat (YLR) in Vermont, I began fully to realize the broad capacities of youth.

It's difficult to articulate how it feels to be consistently impressed by each new person you meet, to be moved by the stories that have shaped their dreams, and inspired by the ways they harness their own potential to take action.

These delegates from a dozen countries built their vision plans with thoughtfulness and conviction, leaving everyone within earshot reconsidering their own potential.

Anna Myers volunteered in Rwanda and is a YLR mentor.

MUHAS faculty and students await Tanzanian President.

WITH MCW SUPPORT, TANZANIA OPENS RENOVATED DENTAL SCHOOL IN DAR ES SALAAM

TANZANIA, November 3rd — President Jakaya Mrisho Kikwete opened the newly renovated Muhimbili University of Health and Allied Sciences School of Dentistry (MUHAS) at an official ceremony in Dar es Salaam.

In his remarks, the President said the government will aim to allocate more funds to the dental school to help sustain operations after the expected increase in enrollment due to the recent renovations.

Eddie Bergman, MCW Executive Director, urged MUHAS Dentistry School graduates to stay in Tanzania after their studies to provide services to the population instead of moving abroad.

Stanley Bergman of Henry Schein Inc., Dr. Anne Eiting Klamar of Midmark Corporation, and John Spencer of Dental Components International represented the team of dental equipment donors. They were joined by more than twenty MCW friends from the U.S. and Tanzania.

The renovation, valued at nearly $2 million, began with a call to action from President Kikwete to Dr. Marion Bergman, MCW Oral Healthcare Program Director.

This led to a two-year effort to build a public-private partnership among Tanzanian health officials, MUHAS Dentistry School faculty, and international dental supply providers under the umbrella of the MCW Oral Healthcare Initiative (OHI).

According to former MUHAS dean, Dr. Emil Kikwilu, Tanzania the country has approximately 306 dental professionals, at a ratio of 1 to 120,000. As a result, thousands of Tanzanians go without treatment for dental maladies every year.

Both the Tanzanian Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, under the leadership of Professor David Mwakyusa, and MCW, hope with its upgraded equipment and excellent training, the school will attract new faculty, train even more students and continue to serve Tanzanians.

Welcome to The Corner

A Message from the Executive Director

Ten years ago, Rob Alsbrooks and I co-founded Miracle Corners of the World (MCW). Today MCW comprises hundreds of friends and supporters collaborating across Africa, the U.S. and around the world on core programs, including leadership development, community centers, and partner initiatives in the areas of oral healthcare, genocide prevention and shipping containers.

To each and every one of our friends, thank you for your leadership, your support, and your contributions along the way, from which our success emanates. Please join us as we celebrate a decade of accomplishment with all our partners who have played a role in bringing MCW to where it is today. Together we can make a difference!

Eddie Bergman is also the Co-Founder of MCW.

A Message from the Editor

In an effort to represent the true character and dedication of MCW, this issue of The Corner illustrates MCW's reach. We want to show the progress we made throughout 2009 and set the stage for what is yet to come in 2010.

The pictures and voices of the MCW team and friends speak for themselves; we have aimed to provide only a general context for each story.

In this issue, we have also added many new features: a map to show our global network of friends and partners; spotlight pages on our projects and the people who have helped our organization grow; as well as a financial statement.

Thanks to all our supporters for allowing MCW to make an impact on youth leaders and their communities.

Thanks to Alfie Hanssen and Sharon Roling for their devotion to MCW over the years and for their help with the preparation of this issue and to Star Quality Printing for their support.

We hope you enjoy all that is described in the following pages and we look forward to receiving your feedback.

Hannah Lee is an MCW intern in NYC and an NYU junior.

In Beloved Memory

Our dear friend and mentor Ambassador Daudi Mwakawago has passed away and is resting in peace. He lived each day of his life to the fullest.

In recent years, the Ambassador would proudly say, "While I'm retired, I'm not tired." He loved his country, he loved Africa, and he loved humanity. He worked hard, he never complained and he was an amazing diplomat with a natural gift of unending patience.

He loved his family, his children and his beloved wife, Mrs. Daisy Mwakawago. He was a sensitive individual who expected the best from everyone. The Ambassador commanded respect and reciprocated with love. He was a gentle giant.

What I admired most about Ambassador Mwakawago was his honesty. He was a humble individual who believed in the principles on which former Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere founded his country, and he adapted and grew as the world embraced all Tanzania has to offer.

The Ambassador was a man of faith, a believer, and a Muslim who respected every form of life, not based on religion but on tolerance. He avoided cynics and believed in life.

He was a man of words, of action, and of honor. He was an optimist despite all that he saw and experienced at the United Nations, in Africa, and around the world.

Let us open our hearts to find a special place for the memory of Ambassador Mwakawago. Let his inspiration live on in all of us who have been touched by him.

In the words of our beloved friend: "Together we can make a difference" or in Swahili "Pamoja tunaweza kuleta mabadiliko."

Community Centers: Zambia

MC-ZAMBIA BREAKS GROUND FOR CENTER IN CHANYANYA

MCW volunteer Nate Crossley stands with MC-Zambia stakeholders.

ZAMBIA, December 18th — The Chanyanya lagoon would be still at dawn if not for the fishermen gliding over its waters in sleek canoes.

At the harbor, village women begin setting up in the small market, arranging dried fish and frying balls of dough. And further inland, a group of youth are pushing wheelbarrows of cement and sand to the construction site of their new community center.

Life in this rural village along Kafue River is hard. Education stops at grade nine, though many students end their studies earlier for economic reasons. Most youth have fishing and subsistence farming skills, and a limited income.

Beyond this, there isn't much opportunity for further growth. What the community has is a vision for its future: a vision of empowering youth to become leaders of change.

It is life-changing to see an entire community work together on an endeavor that allows them to pursue their ambitions of creating and seeking employment opportunities through vocational skills training.

It is exhilarating to work hand-in-hand with fellow youth to effect change, by creating a space in which youth can engage in activities and discussions regarding community needs. And it is inspirational to see these youth take their future into their own hands with such excitement.

It also is empowering to experience the progress made by the two communities — MCW and Chanyanya — working together through the exchange of ideas and skills.

MCW educates the individual not just in skills development, but also in the commonalities among people, no matter where they originate, what they've experienced, or who they are. It is an organization that encourages people to seek change in their communities while assisting them with the tools to do so.

Nate Crossley is an MCW fellow, a Zambia volunteer, and an NYU graduate ('09).

"I recently visited the Miracle Corners Zambia (MCZ) construction site, which has a completed foundation and will soon erect walls. The MCZ Trustees have done a great job of involving the community and identifying local youth leadership. Nate Crossley, an MCW fellow, has immersed himself well into the community. He understands the culture and practices necessary to ensure that the vision plan of the center is on schedule."

MCW ANNOUNCES RECIPIENTS OF ALUMNI VENTURES FUND

NEW YORK, April 1st — MCW launched a new initiative at its fifth annual gala celebration: the MCW Alumni Ventures Fund (AVF). The fund provides grants to youth leadership retreat graduates, enabling them to pursue social ventures in their communities.

In addition to the start-up funding, recipients are matched with a mentor who helps the recipient develop and implement his or her plan, manage finances, and evaluate the work.

"The fund is our opportunity to empower youth, now and in the future. We're taking the spirit, the essence and the assets of MCW, which are the young people, and giving them a chance to fulfill their dreams by mentoring them and investing in their visions," said Steve Kess, Vice President of Global Professional Relations for Henry Schein, Inc. Steve established the fund with his wife Sharon Kess, the AVF chair.

Amma Agyapon, a 2005 retreat graduate and singer, received the award and hopes to give purpose to social entrepreneurship by creating a multimedia, community-based learning program in Harlem to serve the community.

2006 retreat graduate Shawn Crosby also received an award and seeks to further develop an after-school program devoted to teaching leadership skills to young adults for use in future higher education and career opportunities.

MCW SENDS 8TH DENTAL OUTREACH TO SONGEA, TANZANIA

Dr. Elizabeth Lee and Augsta Winna at the Songea clinic.

TANZANIA, August 15th — I was raised in a home that values community service, so it was only natural for me to volunteer with MCW last summer at the Liana Cohen Dental Clinic in Songea, Tanzania. Utilizing my skills as a dental hygienist and my Master's in Public Health, I set out to change the world one tooth at a time.

In August 2009, MCW sent its eighth dental outreach team to Songea to help strengthen the region's oral health care system, working out of the center. I participated in this outreach, and in two previous ones.

To watch someone's vision grow from the ground up is amazing. The dental clinic is progressing nicely; by year's end, all schoolchildren will receive fluoride treatment and oral health education.

After working with the clinic's dental therapist, Eliud Bilal, and the assistant dental therapist, Augsta Winna, I can see how valuable they are to the surrounding community in Songea. I hope that the partnership we have continues to thrive.

Jill Fernandez is a Dental Hygienist and Clinical Associate Professor at NYU's College of Dentistry.

Dr. Elizabeth Lee and Dr. Patrick So also participated in the August outreach. Dr. Walter Schneider participated in the November one.

MCW MARKS 15TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RWANDA GENOCIDE

"Remember, Reflect and Respond," the program included opening remarks by Jacqueline Murekatete, who shared her own story with the audience and spoke about the need to work with genocide survivors in Rwanda and around the world.

The event also included a moment of silence; survivor testimonies; remarks on the "right to protect" from Fabienne Hara of the International Crisis Group (ICG); multi-faith prayers from Father Mesrob of the New York Armenian Community and Rabbi Dan Ain of the New Shul Synagogue; and a special candle-lighting ceremony led by MCW Board Member Eugenie Mukeshimana.

Eddie Bergman delivered moving closing remarks. Special Representative of the Secretary General on Genocide Prevention, Frances Deng, and Rwanda Ambassador to the U.N., Joseph Nsengimana also attended the event (above left).

NEW YORK, APRIL 20th — 100 people attended the event.

As millions around the world gathered in April to remember the victims and survivors of the 1994 genocide in Rwanda, MCW organized a panel discussion at New York University (NYU) titled, "Denial Justice and Memory Fifteen Years After the Genocide." More than

The distinguished panelists included Dr. Gerald Lewis Caplan (African historian); Chantal Kayitesi (genocide survivor); and Dr. Jens Meierhenrich Assistant Professor at Harvard University). Sarah Nadeau (Deputy Director of the non profit Council for Prejudice Reduction) moderated the discussion (right).

The panel followed a gathering at the United Nations Church Center memorializing the 1994 Rwanda genocide, which led to the killing of more than one million people. Titled

I first heard Jacqueline speak at the Museum of Jewish Heritage in New York in January 2008, when I was trained as a museum guide. I was inspired by her story and passion for genocide education, so I decided to intern with MCW.

Now, almost two years later, I could not be happier to look back at how much JM's Corner has grown in such a short period. I am also amazed at how many people we have reached through our work.

When I started, the new community center in Rwanda was in its preliminary stages. Now, with the center nearing completion, I'm hoping to visit Rwanda in the next year to see the impact of our work. I look forward to continuing our work together.

Community Centers: Rwanda

MC-RWANDA COMMUNITY CENTER SET TO OPEN IN THE SPRING

RWANDA, February 1st — After breaking ground in November 2008, construction of MCW's newest community center in the town of Kayenzi, Rwanda is nearly complete. The center is located approximately thirty kilometers outside the capital city of Kigali.

Once the facility is built, Jackson Vugayabagabo, MC-Rwanda Country Coordinator, will oversee the center's daily operations and the development of a wide range of social entrepreneurship programs, including IT training, an English language course, a pre-school, trauma counseling, and a micro-finance initiative. Jackson will work closely with the center's leadership team and advisory board.
